~~Identity~~-shifting worksheet

already has it.
Write what you want, name the identity that is chasing it, and practice the version of you who

Name _____ Date _____

Based on the three-step exercise in The Most Misunderstood Book Ever Written About Reality.

5. Practice one behavior that version of you can do today.
4. Describe the version of you who has already achieved it.
3. List the beliefs, thoughts, feelings, and habits that work against it.
2. Choose one goal for this sitting.
1. Write five to seven goals.

How to use this

01 What you want

purpose, or health.
Write five to seven major goals. A goal might be financial freedom, a business result, a relationship, clarity of

The one goal I will work through today

7. _____
6. _____
5. _____
4. _____
3. _____
2. _____
1. _____

What done looks like

_____

_____

Why this matters to me

_____

_____

_____

What I will do more

What I will do less

- ☐ I have to work extremely hard to make money.
- ☐ I have to do things perfectly and never make a mistake.
- ☐ Needing control
- ☐ Worry, anxiety, or overwhelm
- ☐ Using alcohol or other substances to cope
- ☐ People-pleasing
- ☐ Procrastinating
- ☐ Too much time on my phone

Active patterns. Mark any that apply, then describe them in your own words above.

Habits

Feelings

Thoughts

Beliefs

that are out of alignment with the result.
Describe the version of you that is trying to reach this goal. Write the beliefs, thoughts, feelings, and habits

Today's goal

02 The identity currently trying to produce this

Notes

If I keep being this person, I am likely to keep producing

The one play I am working with today

What it actually produces

The payoff I think it gives me

Play

What it actually produces

The payoff I think it gives me

Play

What it actually produces

The payoff I think it gives me

Play

distraction, and more worry.
Example: the play is worry. The expected payoff is that worry will catch problems in time. What it produces is avoidance,

Name the play, the payoff you expect, and what it actually produces.
A bad play is a habit, belief, or feeling you keep because some part of you thinks it will help you succeed.

Today's goal

03 Bad plays

04 Assume it is already done

The goal is already accomplished. Write how that version of you thinks, feels, and decides inside your real life and your real budget.

Beliefs

Thoughts

Feelings

Habits

If this were already done, who would I be?

How would I think differently?

What would I believe differently?

How would I feel differently?

How would that person approach a problem?

What decisions would that person make?

How would that person show up today?

You create the result by becoming that person first.

- ☐ It fits my real life and my budget.
- ☐ I know who I would be today.
- ☐ I chose one goal.
- ☐ I will practice that person today.
- ☐ I picked a behavior for today.
- ☐ I named the old play.

Checklist

- ☐ Still to practice. What got in the way
- ☐ I practiced it. What I noticed

Before I close the day

When and where

Today I will practice

What I will start doing

What I will stop doing

If this were already done, who would I be today?

The old play I am setting down

Today's goal

> or a generous action you can already afford is the practice.
> Choose a behavior that fits your real circumstances and your real budget. A calmer decision, an honest conversation, decisions you make, and the way you show up.

The person who already has the result is available in how you think, what you allow yourself to feel, the

05 Practice today